Title of Dissertation (日英)	インドネシア国営企業における、選択的、漸進的および部分的民営化政策の研究：マクロおよびミクロ視点からの分析 Selective, Gradual, and Partial Privatization of State Owned Enterprises in Indonesia: Analyses from Macro and Micro Perspectives
Examiners	(Supervisor) SUZUKI Yasushi	MANI, A.
	MATSUMOTO Yasuyuki (The Norinchukin Bank)
Summary of Dissertation Contents	This thesis aims to explore a hypothesis that could help explain why the mode of selective, gradual and partial privatization in Indonesia continues to work well, in other words, this thesis challenges the mainstream argument upon the neo-classical principles over the incentive problem by the state engagement. Given the specificities of Indonesian context, this thesis suggests that the strategy of partial privatization is a feasible and appropriate step for the government, taking into account the expected political cost for contestation and other socio-economic ill-incentives which would have occurred if the strategy of full and rapid privatization had been pursued.
Summary of Dissertation Screening Results	The candidate successfully demonstrates a distinct contribution to a body of knowledge through his original investigation and testing of his hypotheses. The candidate also successfully demonstrates his competence in research processes including econometric techniques. Upon the screening result of "minor rewrite", he adequately revised the thesis.
Summary of Exam Result or Academic Skills	The candidate meets the key requirements for a doctorate degree at APU (Clause 2 of Procedures for the Conferral of Doctoral Degree in the Graduate School of Asia Pacific Studies). He also successfully defended the oral defense.
